

UNA

It pursues
Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme. Milton.
Leave nothing unattempted to destroy
That perjur'd race. Denham.
Shall we be discouraged from any attempt of doing good, by the possibility of our failing in it? How many of the best things would, at this rate, have been left unattempted? Atterb.
UNATTEMPTED. adj. Having no retinue, or attendants.
Your constancy
Hath left you unattended. Shakspeare, Macbeth.
With goddess-like demeanor forth he went,
Not unattended. Milton's Par. Lost.
Such unattended generals can never make a revolution in Parnassus. Dryden.
UNATTENDING. adj. Not attending.
Ill is lost that praise,
That is address'd to unattending ears. Milton.
Ev'ry nymph of the flood, her tresses rending,
Throws off her armlet of pearl in the main;
Neptune in anguish his charge unattending,
Vessels are found'ring, and vows are in vain: Dryden.
UNATTENTIVE. adj. Not regarding.
Man's nature is to unattentive to good, that there can scarce be too many monitors. Government of the Tongue.
Such things are not accompanied with show, and therefore seldom draw the eyes of the unattentive. Tatler, N. 55.
UNATTENDED. adj. Not expiated.
Could you afford him such a bribe as that,
A brother's blood yet unattended? Rever.
UNAVAILABLE. adj. Useless; vain with respect to any purpose.
When we have endeavoured to find out the strongest causes, wherefore they should imagine that reading is so un- available, the most we can learn is, that sermons are the ordinance of God, the scriptures dark, and the labour of reading easy. Hooker.
UNAVAILING. adj. Useless; vain.
Since my inevitable death you know,
You safely unavailing pity show:
'Tis popular to mourn a dying foe. Dryden's Aurengzebe.
Surine he tumbles on the crimson sands,
Before his helpless friends and native bands,
And spreads for aid his unavailing hands. Pope.
UNAVOIDABLE. adj.
1. Inevitable; not to be shunned.
Oppression on one side, and ambition on the other, are the unavoidable occasions of war. Dryden.
It is unavoidable to all, to have opinions; without certain proofs of their truth. Locke.
Single acts of transgression will, through weakness and surprise, be unavoidable to the best guarded. Rogers.
The merits of Christ will make up the unavoidable deficiencies of our service; will prevail for pardon to our sincere repentance. Rogers.
All sentiments of worldly grandeur vanish at that unavoid- able moment, which decides the destiny of men. Clarissa.
2. Not to be missed in ratiocination.
That something is of itself, is self-evident, because we see things are; and the things that we see must either have had some first cause of their being, or have been always, and of themselves: one of them is unavoidable. Tillotson.
I think it unavoidable for every rational creature, that will examine his own or any other existence, to have the notion of an eternal, wise being, who had no beginning. Locke.
UNAVOIDABLENESS. n. f. Inevitability.
How can we conceive it subject to material impressions?
and yet the importunity of pain, and unavoidableness of tensations, strongly persuade that we are so. Glasville.
UNAVOIDABLY. adv. Inevitably.
The most perfect administration must unavoidably produce opposition from multitudes who are made happy by it. Addison.
UNAVOIDED. adj. Inevitable.
We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavoided is the danger now. Shakspeare.
Rare poems ask rare friends;
Yet say, since the mouth of mankind be Their unavoided subject, fewest see. B. Johnson.
UNAUTHORISED. adj. Not supported by authority; not properly commissioned.
To kiss in private?
An unauthorised kiss. Shakspeare's Othello.
It is for you to ravage seas and land,
Unauthoriz'd by my supreme command. Dryden.
UNAWARE. adj. [from aware, or uary.]
UNAWARES. adv. Without thought; without previous meditation.
1. Without thought; without previous meditation.
It is my father's face,
Whom, in this conflict, I unawares have kill'd. Shakspeare.
Firm we submit; yet possible to ferve,
And fall into deception unawares. Milton.

UNB

A pleasant beverage he prepar'd before,
Of wine and honey mix'd; with added store
Of opium: to his keeper this he brought,
Who swallow'd unawares the sleepy draught,
And snor'd secure. Dryden.
'Tis a sensation like that of a limb lopp'd off; one is trying every minute unawares to use it, and finds it is not.
2. Unexpectedly; when it is not thought of; suddenly.
Take heed lest you fall unawares into that inconvenience you formerly found fault with. Spenser.
Left destruction come upon him at unawares, and let his net that he hath hid, catch himself. Psalms xxxvi. 8.
My hand, unawares to me, was, by the force of that endeavour it just before employed to sustain the fallen weight, carried up with such violence, that I bruised it. Boyle.
He breaks at unawares upon our walks.
And, like a midnight wolf, invades the fold. Dryden.
Though we live never so long, we are still surpris'd: we put the evil day far from us, and then it catches us unawares, and we tremble at the prospect. Wile.
UNAWED. adj. Unrestrained by fear or reverence.
The raging and fanatic dismember of the house of commons must be attributed to the want of such good ministers of the crown, as, being unawed by any guilt of their own,
could have watched other men.
Unfear'd by punishment, unawed by fear,
His words were limple, and his soul sincere. Dryden.
UNAWKED. adj.
1. Not tamed; not taught to bear the rider.
Then I beat my tabor;
At which, like unawked colts, they prick'd their ears,
Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt musick. Shakspeare, Tempest.
A well wayed horse will safely convey thee to thy journey's end, when an unawked filly may give thee a fall. Swilling.
They flinch like unawked fillies. Dennis's Letters.
2. Not contented; not aided.
Let the weight of thine own infamy
Fall on thee unsupported, and unawked. Daniel's Civil War.
UNBALANCED. adj. Not poised; not in equipoise.
Let earth unbalanced d from her orbit fly,
Planets and suns run lawless through the sky. Pope.
UNBALANCED. adj. Not kept steady by ballast; unsteady.
They having but newly left those grammatical flats, where they stuck unreasonably, to learn a few words with lame-table construction; and now on the sudden transported under another climate, to be tost and turmoil'd with their unbalanced wits, in fathomless and unquiet depths of controversy, do, for the most part, grow into hatred of learning. Milton.
As at sea th' unbalanced vessel rides,
Cast to and fro, the sport of winds and tides:
So in the bounding chariot tost'd on high,
The youth is hurly'd headlong through the sky. Addison.
UNBAND. adj. [from band.] Wanting a string, or band.
Your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, and every thing demonstrating a careless desolation. Shakspeare.
TO UNBAR. v. a. [from bar.] To open, by removing the bars; to unbolt.
'Tis not secure, this place or that to guard,
If any other entrance stand unbar'd. Denham.
These rites the king refus'd,
Deaf to their cries; nor would the gates unbar
Of sacred peace, or loose th' imprison'd war. Dryden.
UNBARRED. adj. [from bar, Lat.] Not shaven. Out of use.
Must I go shew them my unbarbed scone?
Must my base tongue give to my noble heart
A lie? Shakspeare, Coriolanus.
UNBARKED. adj. [from bark.] Decorated; stripped of the bark.
A branch of a tree, unbarked some space at the bottom, and so set in the ground, hath grown. Bacon.
UNBASHFUL. adj. Impudent; shameless.
Nor did I with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility. Shakspeare.
UNBATED. adj. [from bate.] Not repressed; not blunted.
Where is the horse, that doth untread again
His tedious measures with th' unbated fire
That he did pace them first? Shakspeare, Merchant of Venice.
UNBATHED. adj. [from bath.] Not wet.
Fierce Pamond, their passage to prevent,
Thrust full on Cymon's back in his descent;
The blade return'd unbathed, and to the handle bent. Dryden.
UNBATTERED. adj. Not injured by blows.
I cannot strike at wretched kernes, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their slaves: or thou, Macbeth;
Or else my sword, with an unbattered edge,
I sheath again undeeded. Shakspeare's Macbeth.
UNBENRING. adj. Banging no fruit. Does

UNB

He with his pruning hook disjoins
And grafts more happy in their stead.
TO UNBAY. v. a. To let open; to free from the restraint of mounds.
I ought now to loose the reins of my affections, to unbay the current of my passion, and love on without boundary or measure. Norris's Miscellany.
UNBEATEN. adj.
1. Not treated with blows.
His mare was truer than his chronicle;
For she had rode five miles unpurr'd, unbeaten,
And then at last turn'd tail towards Neweaton. Bp. Corbet.
2. Not trodden.
We must tread unbeaten paths, and make a way where we do not find one; but it shall be always with a light in our hand. Bacon.
If your bold muse dare tread unbeaten paths. Rescommon.
Virtue, to crown her fav'rites, loves to try
Some new, unbeaten passage to the sky. Swift.
UNBECOMING. adj. Indecent; unfit; indecorous.
Here's our chief guest. —
—If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all things unbecoming. Shakspeare's Macbeth.
None of retreat, no unbecoming deed
That argu'd fear. Milton's Par. Lost.
I should rather believe that the nose was the seat of wrath in beasts than in mankind; and that it was unbecoming of any but Pan, who had very much of the beast in him, to wrinkle up his nose in anger. Dryden.
My grief lets unbecoming speeches fall:
I should have dy'd, and not complain'd at all. Dryden.
This petulance in conversation prevails among some of that sex, where it appears the most unbecoming and unnatural. Addison's Freeholder.
Men of wit, learning, and virtue, might strike out every offensive or unbecoming passage from plays. Swift.
Such proceed upon debates without unbecoming warmth. Swift.
UNBECOMINGNESS. n. f. Indecency; indecorum.
If words are sometimes to be used, they ought to be grave, kind and sober, representing the ill or unbecomingness of the fault. Locke.
TO UNBED. v. a. To raise from a bed.
Eels unbed themselves, and stir at the noise of thunder. Walton's Angler.
UNBEFITTING. adj. Not becoming; not suitable.
Love is full of unbefitting strains,
All wanton as a child, skipping in vain. Shakspeare.
Far be it that I should write thee fin, or blame!
Or think thee unbefitting holiest place. Milton.
He might several times have made peace with his discontented subjects upon terms not at all unbefitting his dignity or interest; but he rather chose to sacrifice the whole alliance to his private passion. Swift.
TO UNBEGUILE. v. n. To deprive of existence.
Wishes each minute he could unbeguile
Those rebel sons, who dare t' usurp his seat. Dryden.
UNBEGUOT. adj. [from beguot.]
UNBEGOTTEN. adj. [from begot.]
1. Eternal; without generation.
Why should he attribute the same honour to matter, which is subject to corruption, as to the eternal, unbegotten, and immutable God? Stillington.
2. Not yet generated.
God omnipotent, must ring
Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn, and unbegot. Shakspeare.
In thy pow'r
It lies yet, ere conception, to prevent
The race unbegt, to being yet unbegot. Milton's Par. Lost.
Where a child finds his own parents his perversers, better were it for him to have been unborn and unbegot, than ask a blessing of those whose conversation breathes nothing but a curse. South's Sermons.
TO UNBEGUILE. v. a. To undeceive; to set free from the influence of any deceit.
Then unbeguile thyself, and know with me,
That angels, though on earth employ'd they be,
Are fill in heav'n. Denne.
Their condescensions unbeguiled the vulgar of the odd opinion the loyalists had formerly infused into them, by their conjunctory invectives. Hewel's Vocal Forest.
UNBENED. adj. Unseen; not discoverable to the sight.
These then, though unbened in deep of night,
Shine not in vain. Milton.
UNBELIEF. n. f.
1. Incredulity.
'Tis not vain or fabulous,
What the sage poets, taught by th' heav'nly muse,

UNB

Storied of old in high immortal verse,
Of dire chimera's, and enchanted isles,
And rifted rocks, whose entrance leads to hell;
For such there be, but unbelief is blind. Milton.
I'm justly plagu'd by this your unbelief. Dryden.
And am myself the cause of my own grief.
Such an universal acquaintance with things will keep you from an excess of credulity and unbelief; i. e. a readiness to believe, or to deny every thing at first hearing. Watts.
2. Infidelity; irreligion.
Where profess'd unbelief is, there can be no visible church of Christ; there may be where found belief wanteth. Hooker.
TO UNBELIEVE. v. a.
1. To discredit; not to trust.
Heav'n shield your grace from woe;
As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbelieved go. Shakspeare.
So great a prince and favourite so suddenly metamorphosed into travellers with no greater train, was enough to make any man unbelieve his five senses. Walton's Buckingham.
2. Not to think real or true.
Nor less than sight and hearing could convince,
Of such an unforeseen and unbelieved offence. Dryden.
UNBELIEVER. n. f. An infidel; one who believes not the scripture of God.
The ancient fathers being often constrained to shew, what warrant they had to much to rely upon the scriptures, endeavoured still to maintain the authority of the books of God, by arguments such as unbelievers themselves must needs think reasonable, if they judg'd thereof as they should. Hooker.
What endless war wou'd jealous nations tear,
If none above did witness what they swear?
Sad fate of unbelievers, and yet just.
Among themselves to find no little trust. Waller.
In the new testament, religion is usually expressed by faith in God and Christ, and the love of them. Hence it is that true christians are so frequently called believers; and wicked and ungodly men unbelievers. Tillotson.
He pronounces the children of such parents as were, one of them a christian, and the other an unbeliever, holy, on account of the faith and holiness of that one. Atterbury.
Men always grow vicious before they become unbelievers;
but if you would once convince profligates, by topics drawn from the view of their own quiet reputation, and health, their infidelity would soon drop off. Swift's Miscellanies.
UNBELIEVING. adj. Infidel.
No pause,
No stay of slaughter found his vigorous arm;
But th' unbelieving squadrons turn'd to flight,
Smote in the rear. Phillips.
This wrought the greatest confusion in the unbelieving
Jews, and the greatest conviction in the Gentiles. Addison.
In the days of the apostle, when all who profess'd themselves disciples of Christ were converts of conscience, this severe censure might be restrained to the unbelieving part of mankind. Rogers's Sermons.
UNBELIEVED. adj. Not loved.
Whoe'er you are, not unbelov'd by heav'n,
Since on our friendly shore your ships are driv'n. Dryden.
TO UNBEND. v. a. To relax; to remit; to ease.
You unbend your noble strength, to think
So brain-sickly of things. Shakspeare's Macbeth.
It is lawful to relax and unbend our bow, but not to suffer it to be unready, or untrung. Taylor's Holy Living.
Here have I seen the king, when great affairs
Gave leave to slacken and unbend his cares,
Attended to the chase by all the flow'r of youth. Denham.
From those great cares when ease your soul unbends,
Your pleasures are design'd to noble ends. Dryden.
I must be in the battle; but I'll go
With empty quiver, and unbended bow. Dryden.
UNBENDING. adj.
1. Not suffering flexure.
Not so, when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er th' unbending corn, and skirts along the main. Pope.
2. Devoted to relaxation.
Since what was omitted in the acting is now kept in, I hope it may entertain your lordship at an unbending hour. Rowe.
UNBENEVOLENT. adj. Not kind.
A religion which not only forbids, but by its natural influence sweetens all bitterness and asperity of temper, and corrects that selfish narrowness of spirits, which inclines men to a fierce, unbenevolent behaviour. Rogers's Sermons.
UNBENEFICED. adj. Not preferred to a benefice.
More vacant pulpits wou'd more converts make;
All wou'd have latitude enough to take:
The rest unbenefic'd your sects maintain
UNBENIGHTED. adj. Never visited by darkness. Dryden.
Beyond the polar circles; to them day
Had unbenighted thone, while the low sun,
To recompence his distance, in their sight
Had rounded still the horizon. Milton's Par. Lost.
UNBENIGN.
